CLASSIFICATION ASSIGNMENT RULES

STATE / CLASS CT / 8017	LOCATION 2
CLASSIFICATION Retail store - all employees	PAYROLL / RATE $54,124 / 0.74
PREMIUM $400	FORM WC 00 00 00 C 01 15

A. Classification And Rating Reference

This form applies to Retail store - all employees in CT, class 8017, at Location 2.

The information page shows estimated remuneration of $54,124, manual rate 0.74, experience modification 1.04, and estimated premium $400.

Form WC 00 00 00 C edition 01 15 supplies the applicable policy terms for this classification.

The classification schedule assigns estimated remuneration to specific categories based on the operational nature of the enterprise.

B. The governing classification is determined by the operations that generate the largest amount of payroll, excluding standard exceptions.

Standard exceptions include clerical office employees, outside salespersons, and drivers, provided they meet strict operational criteria.

If an enterprise consists of distinct and separate operations, multiple classifications may be authorized under specific manual rules.

To qualify for multiple classifications, the employer must maintain physical separation of operations and distinct payroll records for each segment.

When payroll is not properly segregated in the ledgers, the entire remuneration will be assigned to the highest-rated classification applicable.

C. Changes in business operations, product lines, or facility locations must be reported promptly to ensure accurate classification assignment.

We retain the right to reclassify operations during the term or upon final audit if the actual duties deviate from the initial descriptions.

Reclassification may result in retroactive premium adjustments affecting the current and immediately preceding policy periods.

State-specific manual rules supersede general classification guidelines whenever a conflict arises regarding proper assignment.

EXPERIENCE RATING PLAN APPLICATION

FORM WC 00 00 00 C 01 15

Classification And Rating Reference

This form applies to Outside salespersons in MA, class 8742, at Location 3.

The information page shows estimated remuneration of $70,826, manual rate 0.18, experience modification 1.04, and estimated premium $127.

Form WC 00 00 00 C edition 01 15 supplies the applicable policy terms for this classification.

The experience modification factor adjusts the manual premium based on the historical loss record of the enterprise.

This factor is calculated by an authorized rating bureau using payroll and loss data from the designated experience period.

An experience modification factor greater than unity indicates higher-than-average historical losses, resulting in a premium surcharge.

A factor less than unity reflects favorable historical loss performance, yielding a premium credit.

The modification factor applies to the contract as a whole unless a state-specific endorsement dictates intrastate application.

If the rating bureau revises the modification factor during the term, the premium will be adjusted retroactively to the effective date of the revision.

Changes in ownership, corporate structure, or combinability status must be reported within ninety days to determine the impact on the experience rating.

Failure to report ownership changes may result in the application of a penalty modifier or the forfeiture of a favorable experience credit.

The employer cannot opt out of the experience rating plan if the enterprise meets the minimum premium eligibility threshold.

Disputes regarding the statistical data used to calculate the modification factor must be directed to the authorized rating bureau rather than the carrier.

2. This endorsement establishes the methodology for applying volume-based premium discounts to the final computed premium.

Premium discounts recognize the relative reduction in administrative and acquisition expenses associated with larger contracts.

The discount is applied only after the manual premium has been adjusted by the experience modification factor and any schedule rating credits.

The first tier of standard premium is exempt from the discount calculation, serving as the baseline for administrative expense recovery.

3. Subsequent tiers of standard premium are subject to progressively higher discount percentages, as outlined in the authorized rating manual.

If the contract spans multiple states, the discount is calculated using the combined standard premium across all applicable jurisdictions.

The discount percentages vary depending on whether the enterprise is classified under the stock company or non-stock company tables.

If the contract is cancelled prior to expiration, the premium discount will be recalculated based on the actual standard premium earned.

4. The premium discount does not apply to specific supplementary charges, such as the terrorism risk premium or catastrophe assessments.

We reserve the right to withhold the premium discount if the employer fails to remit payments timely or refuses to cooperate with the final audit.

POLICYHOLDER NOTICE - INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR POLICY

To the policyholder:

A. The federal government provides a financial backstop for certain catastrophic losses resulting from certified acts of terrorism.

Under this federal framework, the government shares the financial burden of terrorism claims once a specified industry-wide threshold is reached.

The premium associated with this contract includes a specific charge for the terrorism exposure, which is detailed on the administrative schedules.

This charge is calculated as a percentage of the manual premium and is not subject to experience modification or schedule rating adjustments.

The federal program contains an aggregate cap on total liability; if losses exceed this cap, benefits may be reduced proportionally.

B. State workers compensation statutes do not permit employers to reject or opt out of the terrorism coverage component.

Any future modifications to the federal backstop legislation may result in mid-term adjustments to the terrorism premium charge.

This contract does not automatically encompass federal maritime exposures unless specifically designated on the administrative schedules.

If the enterprise engages in loading, unloading, repairing, or building vessels, the employer must request the appropriate federal extension.

When the extension is attached, the remuneration associated with the maritime operations must be segregated in the payroll ledgers.

3. Maritime remuneration is subject to distinct manual rates and rating methodologies established by the federal oversight agency.

The employer must comply with all federal reporting requirements and safety regulations mandated by the maritime statutes.

Failure to secure the necessary federal extension when required may expose the enterprise to severe statutory penalties and uninsured liabilities.

We reserve the right to audit the proximity of operations to navigable waters to determine the potential for incidental maritime exposure.

4. Incidental maritime exposure discovered during the final audit will be rated retroactively using the applicable federal classification codes.

The defense and settlement provisions of this contract apply equally to claims adjudicated under the federal maritime administrative system.

This document modifies the standard provisions to comply with the statutory requirements of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The cancellation notice period for nonpayment of premium is extended to strictly comply with the state's administrative code.

When calculating remuneration for premium purposes, the maximum payroll limitations for executive officers are dictated by the state rating bureau.

The employer must post the official notice to employees regarding their rights and the procedures for obtaining medical treatment.

Failure to post the required workplace notices may subject the enterprise to administrative fines levied by the state regulatory department.

Disputes regarding the assignment of classification codes must be submitted to the state rating bureau's dispute resolution panel.

The experience modification factor applied to Massachusetts operations is calculated exclusively using the state's approved statistical plan.

We will notify the state industrial accident board electronically whenever this contract is issued, renewed, or terminated.

The employer must utilize the state-mandated forms when reporting injuries and must submit them within the required seven-day window.

Any provision in the standard contract that conflicts with Massachusetts law is hereby amended to conform to the statutory minimums.

FRAUD WARNING AND PENALTY NOTICE

To the policyholder:

1. Misrepresenting payroll, misclassifying employees, or concealing operations to obtain a lower premium is a severe violation of law.

Any person who knowingly submits false information on an application, audit ledger, or claim form may be subject to criminal prosecution.

Regulatory authorities actively investigate suspected fraud and may impose substantial fines, restitution orders, and imprisonment.

We utilize advanced data analytics and field investigations to detect discrepancies in reported remuneration and operational descriptions.

2. If premium fraud is discovered, we will pursue immediate cancellation of the contract and report the findings to the state fraud bureau.

Employers who encourage or assist workers in filing exaggerated or fabricated injury reports will face civil liability and loss of coverage.

Workers who collect benefits while simultaneously earning unreported income from other sources are committing benefit fraud.

We encourage anyone with knowledge of fraudulent activities related to this contract to contact our anonymous reporting hotline.

This notice is informational. Coverage is governed by the policy forms and endorsements issued with the declarations.

The disputed portion will be placed on an administrative hold while the grievance is reviewed by the audit dispute resolution team.

When a third party is responsible for an occupational injury, we inherit the employer's right to seek recovery for benefits provided.

B. The employer must take all necessary steps to preserve these recovery rights and must not execute any pre-injury waivers without our knowledge.

Any recovery obtained from a responsible third party will first be applied to reimburse the expenses incurred during the pursuit of the claim.

The remaining balance of the recovery will be used to offset the benefits distributed to the injured worker.

If the recovery exceeds the total benefits provided, the surplus will be distributed according to the statutory guidelines of the jurisdiction.

The employer must execute any documents, assignments, or legal instruments required to facilitate the recovery action.

C. We maintain the exclusive authority to direct the recovery litigation, select legal counsel, and negotiate settlement terms.

Form WC 04 03 06 edition 01 15 supplies the applicable policy terms for this classification.

This endorsement establishes the methodology for applying volume-based premium discounts to the final computed premium.

Premium discounts recognize the relative reduction in administrative and acquisition expenses associated with larger contracts.

The discount is applied only after the manual premium has been adjusted by the experience modification factor and any schedule rating credits.

The first tier of standard premium is exempt from the discount calculation, serving as the baseline for administrative expense recovery.

Subsequent tiers of standard premium are subject to progressively higher discount percentages, as outlined in the authorized rating manual.

If the contract spans multiple states, the discount is calculated using the combined standard premium across all applicable jurisdictions.

The discount percentages vary depending on whether the enterprise is classified under the stock company or non-stock company tables.

If the contract is cancelled prior to expiration, the premium discount will be recalculated based on the actual standard premium earned.

The premium discount does not apply to specific supplementary charges, such as the terrorism risk premium or catastrophe assessments.

We reserve the right to withhold the premium discount if the employer fails to remit payments timely or refuses to cooperate with the final audit.

The information page shows estimated remuneration of $353,824, manual rate 0.27, experience modification 1.04, and estimated premium $955.

Form WC 00 00 00 C edition 04 21 supplies the applicable policy terms for this classification.

2. The enterprise has been enrolled in a participating dividend plan, which offers the potential for a return of premium based on favorable loss experience.

Dividends are not guaranteed and are declared solely at the discretion of the corporate board of directors following the close of the financial year.

The calculation of any potential dividend relies on the ratio of incurred losses to the final audited premium of the enterprise.

Incurred losses include all paid benefits, established reserves for open claims, and allocated loss adjustment expenses.

3. The evaluation of losses for dividend purposes occurs six months after the expiration of the contract to allow for claim maturation.

If the enterprise cancels the contract prior to the expiration date, all eligibility for dividend participation is immediately forfeited.

The enterprise must comply with all audit requests and have no outstanding premium balances to receive a declared dividend.

Any declared dividend will be applied as a credit against the premium of the renewal contract before a cash disbursement is considered.

4. The dividend plan parameters, including the retention factors and maximum payout percentages, are filed with the state regulatory authority.

Modifications to the dividend plan structure will only apply to future policy terms and will not affect the current evaluation period.

Form WC 00 00 00 C edition 07 23 supplies the applicable policy terms for this classification.
2. The premium shown on the schedules is an initial estimate based on anticipated remuneration for the upcoming term.
At the conclusion of the policy period, a final computation determines the exact premium owed based on actual exposures.
The employer must maintain complete and accurate ledgers detailing all wages, bonuses, commissions, and substitute compensation provided to workers.

We reserve the authority to inspect these ledgers and related tax filings during normal business hours.
3. This inspection authority extends for up to three years following the expiration date or cancellation of the contract.
If the final computed premium exceeds the initial estimate, the employer must remit the outstanding balance upon receipt of the final invoice.
If the final computed premium is less than the initial estimate, a refund will be issued, subject to any minimum premium requirements.
Failure to provide requested ledgers or cooperate with the auditor may result in an estimated final billing.

Form WC 00 00 01 A edition 04 21 supplies the applicable policy terms for this classification.

The classification schedule assigns estimated remuneration to specific categories based on the operational nature of the enterprise.

B. The governing classification is determined by the operations that generate the largest amount of payroll, excluding standard exceptions.

Standard exceptions include clerical office employees, outside salespersons, and drivers, provided they meet strict operational criteria.

If an enterprise consists of distinct and separate operations, multiple classifications may be authorized under specific manual rules.

To qualify for multiple classifications, the employer must maintain physical separation of operations and distinct payroll records for each segment.

When payroll is not properly segregated in the ledgers, the entire remuneration will be assigned to the highest-rated classification applicable.

C. Changes in business operations, product lines, or facility locations must be reported promptly to ensure accurate classification assignment.

We retain the right to reclassify operations during the term or upon final audit if the actual duties deviate from the initial descriptions.

Reclassification may result in retroactive premium adjustments affecting the current and immediately preceding policy periods.

State-specific manual rules supersede general classification guidelines whenever a conflict arises regarding proper assignment.

The experience modification factor adjusts the manual premium based on the historical loss record of the enterprise.
This factor is calculated by an authorized rating bureau using payroll and loss data from the designated experience period.
An experience modification factor greater than unity indicates higher-than-average historical losses, resulting in a premium surcharge.

A factor less than unity reflects favorable historical loss performance, yielding a premium credit.
The modification factor applies to the contract as a whole unless a state-specific endorsement dictates intrastate application.
If the rating bureau revises the modification factor during the term, the premium will be adjusted retroactively to the effective date of the revision.
Changes in ownership, corporate structure, or combinability status must be reported within ninety days to determine the impact on the experience rating.
Failure to report ownership changes may result in the application of a penalty modifier or the forfeiture of a favorable experience credit.
The employer cannot opt out of the experience rating plan if the enterprise meets the minimum premium eligibility threshold.
Disputes regarding the statistical data used to calculate the modification factor must be directed to the authorized rating bureau rather than the carrier.

When a third party is responsible for an occupational injury, we inherit the employer's right to seek recovery for benefits provided.

The employer must take all necessary steps to preserve these recovery rights and must not execute any pre-injury waivers without our knowledge.

Any recovery obtained from a responsible third party will first be applied to reimburse the expenses incurred during the pursuit of the claim.

The remaining balance of the recovery will be used to offset the benefits distributed to the injured worker.

If the recovery exceeds the total benefits provided, the surplus will be distributed according to the statutory guidelines of the jurisdiction.

The employer must execute any documents, assignments, or legal instruments required to facilitate the recovery action.

We maintain the exclusive authority to direct the recovery litigation, select legal counsel, and negotiate settlement terms.

The employer must attend hearings, depositions, and trials as requested to support the recovery efforts.

If the employer independently pursues a recovery action, they must notify us immediately and protect our lien on the proceeds.

Compromising a third-party claim without our written approval may jeopardize the injured worker's entitlement to future benefits.

Form WC 00 00 01 A edition 07 23 supplies the applicable policy terms for this classification.

2. The experience modification factor adjusts the manual premium based on the historical loss record of the enterprise.

This factor is calculated by an authorized rating bureau using payroll and loss data from the designated experience period.

An experience modification factor greater than unity indicates higher-than-average historical losses, resulting in a premium surcharge.

A factor less than unity reflects favorable historical loss performance, yielding a premium credit.

3. The modification factor applies to the contract as a whole unless a state-specific endorsement dictates intrastate application.

If the rating bureau revises the modification factor during the term, the premium will be adjusted retroactively to the effective date of the revision.

Changes in ownership, corporate structure, or combinability status must be reported within ninety days to determine the impact on the experience rating.

Failure to report ownership changes may result in the application of a penalty modifier or the forfeiture of a favorable experience credit.

4. The employer cannot opt out of the experience rating plan if the enterprise meets the minimum premium eligibility threshold.

When the employer requests termination of the contract prior to the expiration date, the return premium is calculated using the short rate table.

B. The short rate penalty compensates for the upfront administrative costs and underwriting expenses incurred during issuance.

To determine the short rate premium, the full annual premium is first calculated based on the actual exposures during the active period.

The active period is measured in exact days from the inception date to the requested termination date.

A specific multiplier, derived from the authorized short rate table, is then applied to the full annual premium.

This multiplier is always greater than the simple pro-rata fraction, resulting in a higher retained premium for the abbreviated term.

C. The difference between the paid premium and the calculated short rate premium represents the final refund due to the employer.

If the paid premium is insufficient to cover the short rate calculation, the employer will be invoiced for the remaining balance.

The short rate penalty is waived if the enterprise is sold, operations cease entirely, or the contract is rewritten with an affiliated carrier.

The state-specific short rate table supersedes the standard table if the jurisdiction mandates a different penalty structure.

The enterprise has been enrolled in a participating dividend plan, which offers the potential for a return of premium based on favorable loss experience.

Dividends are not guaranteed and are declared solely at the discretion of the corporate board of directors following the close of the financial year.

The calculation of any potential dividend relies on the ratio of incurred losses to the final audited premium of the enterprise.

Incurred losses include all paid benefits, established reserves for open claims, and allocated loss adjustment expenses.

The evaluation of losses for dividend purposes occurs six months after the expiration of the contract to allow for claim maturation.

If the enterprise cancels the contract prior to the expiration date, all eligibility for dividend participation is immediately forfeited.

The enterprise must comply with all audit requests and have no outstanding premium balances to receive a declared dividend.

Any declared dividend will be applied as a credit against the premium of the renewal contract before a cash disbursement is considered.

The dividend plan parameters, including the retention factors and maximum payout percentages, are filed with the state regulatory authority.

Modifications to the dividend plan structure will only apply to future policy terms and will not affect the current evaluation period.

TERRORISM RISK INSURANCE ACT DISCLOSURE

POLICYHOLDER NOTICE - INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR POLICY

To the policyholder:

1. The federal government provides a financial backstop for certain catastrophic losses resulting from certified acts of terrorism.

Under this federal framework, the government shares the financial burden of terrorism claims once a specified industry-wide threshold is reached.

The premium associated with this contract includes a specific charge for the terrorism exposure, which is detailed on the administrative schedules.

This charge is calculated as a percentage of the manual premium and is not subject to experience modification or schedule rating adjustments.

State workers compensation statutes do not permit employers to reject or opt out of the terrorism coverage component.

Any future modifications to the federal backstop legislation may result in mid-term adjustments to the terrorism premium charge.
